Its earliest documented uses come from accounts of prisoners, soldiers, and convicts who faced execution or harsh punishment, often forced to walk long distances as part of their sentence or prior to their death.

Etymologically, 'dead man's walk' references the literal act of walking a condemned individual to their execution site, which was often a gallows or a firing squad location. The 'dead man' in this context is the individual about to be executed, and the 'walk' describes their movement along a designated route.
